

MISSING GIRL STUDENT FOUND AT SO. LANGHORNE; LEAVES WITH BROTHER AND SISTER FOR N. Y.

Caroline Lee Gilbert Found In
Diner Along Lincoln
Highway

VICTIM OF AMNESIA

State Police Feel Confident
Young Woman Is
Amnesia Victim

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Mar. 17.—Caroline Lee Gilbert, 20, Hunter College student who had been missing since last Thursday night, and who was located in a diner here last evening, accompanied her sister and brother to New York this morning by automobile.

Pennsylvania Motor Police at the Oxford Valley barracks had contacted New York police by teletype last evening to ascertain identity of the girl, and later conversed with the young woman's mother by telephone. Caroline, who has been in Philadelphia and vicinity for several days, and who at first insisted she was "Mary Heather," refused to talk to her mother by telephone. She remained at the police barracks overnight, and when her sister and brother, Rosalie and William L. Gilbert, arrived this morning, she said she did not know them.

Police at the local barracks are of the opinion that the young woman is actually an amnesia victim. During her stay at the barracks she spent much of her time studying Greek, and appeared to read and write the language fluently. When she would become perturbed she would hurl the book aside, or grasp it tighter and delve deeply.

According to Rosalie Gilbert, Caroline was a great student, and spent as high as 12 and 14 hours a day studying. The family states that she disappeared from home once previously.

According to Sergeant Kelly the girl was noticed by Joseph Law, of Parkland, as he ate in the Sodano diner, here, last evening. He had with him a newspaper which carried her picture. Mr. Law immediately telephoned the police barracks, Sergeant Kelly and Private Boiwka hurrying to the spot. When they arrived the girl was asleep in a rear room, she having informed the waitress she was tired and asked if there was a place she might rest. The officers examined contents of her purse, finding clippings telling of her disappearance. The girl was then awakened, but denied she was Caroline Gilbert, insisting she was "Mary Heather." The girl was taken to the police barracks, and newspaper stories examined to determine her identity. The fact that nails on two fingers of her left hand had been chewed quite short practically "clinched" the identity, and officers teletyped New York police. Mrs. Gilbert, mother of the missing girl, was then contacted by telephone, and she was given a description of the clothing the girl was wearing. Mrs. Gilbert stating that without a doubt it was Caroline. Caroline refused to talk with her mother. She was detained at the barracks overnight, and when her

Are You This Couple? If So Aid the Police

Today an appeal is made to the man and woman who on the evening of March 7th, took a young girl into their car on the Borden-town road and gave her a ride to the intersection of the Bristol Pike.

The State Police or Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo would greatly appreciate it, if this man and woman would at once communicate with either or both of them. It is urgent that the authorities contact this man and woman at once and they are urged to advise the authorities of their identity.

ASKS AUXILIARY GROUP TO BE READY TO SERVE

Mrs. Harlan Everitt Tells
Langhorne Group War
May Be Long One

CLOTHING IS COLLECTED

LANGHORNE, Mar. 17.—The speaker at the meeting of American Legion Auxiliary of Jesse W. Soby Post, held last evening in the Memorial House, was Mrs. Harlan Everitt, Philadelphia, sub-chairman of press and publicity of the American Legion Auxiliary of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Everitt, who was introduced by the local Auxiliary president, Mrs. Frank Cassidy, gave some thought to present world conditions, reminding that in every war in which the United States has ever engaged, it has had losses before gaining ground. "We are, however, possibly facing many years of war. We will be called upon to do a lot of things we never did before, and to contend with many things with which we never contended. But we will face the future with courage."

She recalled how 23 years ago the American Legion had attempted to put across in Washington a program of plans for more armaments, a bigger navy, etc. "If we of the Auxiliary, and if the people of the nation had supported that plan more wholeheartedly, this country would not be in the shape it is in today."

She reminded of Theodore Roosevelt's adage, "Walk softly and carry a big stick," telling that it means just as much today as it ever did, adding that this nation should not look for trouble, but should always be prepared for emergency. She admonished that all must be at all times on the alert, ready for any eventuality. The speaker, at the request of the president, gave suggestions for raising of funds for the organization.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports were given by Mrs. Gilbert Bonnell and Mrs. Robert Leedom, respectively. It was announced that the Auxiliary has ordered 1500 poppies to be sold during the Memorial season, 500 more than the usual number. Reports were announced for the individual members, regarding blood of each which was typed by a visiting physician last month. The president announced that she has forwarded a copy of the booklet, "Fall In," to each boy from this area in service with the armed forces.

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERNAN

(I. N. S. Staff Writer)

Britain's Under-Secretary of State has asked the populace to kindly refrain from "fretful and querulous criticism."

It will be noted that he bracketed "fretful and querulous" with "criticism."

He did not say it was improper to examine the checkered vests of pseudo patriots for gray stains.

He did not say it was improper to check into the mumbo-jumbo activities of the professional glimmer boys currently wrapped in the flag.

He did not even suggest suspension of reason, logic or horse sense for the duration.

He just said he wished people would lay off "fretful and querulous criticism."

We will initial that for home consumption.

Then we will ask what horse-shoe pitchers have to do with war, is that fretful and querulous?

What do you think?

Thought for the day: Silence gives consent—too often.

MRS. NELSON J. GROW TELLS OF ORDEAL OF THE RAID MADE BY THE JAPANESE ON PEARL HARBOR

Still unnerved from the ordeal of the Japanese raid on Pearl Harbor, T. H., the sleepless nights which followed, the strain of caring for the wounded, and the treacherous voyage across the Pacific Ocean, Mrs. Nelson J. Grow and children Bertha and "Billy," paid a visit during the week-end to Mrs. Grow's parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Grow, 609 Bath street. They are staying for a time with the evacuee's parents in Cape May, N. J.

The younger Mrs. Grow and her children, who have been residing in the islands with their husband and father, who is a co-pilot and mechanic in the U. S. Coast Guard Air Corps, have witnessed much of the sorrow wrought upon the people of that island paradise during the past three months.

At the time of the initial raid on Sunday, December 7th, Nelson Grow and his children, Bertha, 10, and "Billy," 7, were at their home in Pearl City, Mr. Grow being off-duty. Mrs. Grow was serving as a waitress in the officers' mess quarters at nearby Pearl Harbor. In recounting the experience to her parents-in-law, she told that "the first noise was as of a terrific storm. The silver-ware and dishes clattered to the floor. When it was realized that planes were raiding, we were ordered to drop to the floor. There they lay, prone on the concrete for about two hours, while the terrific onslaught continued." Mrs. Grow, who

SOUTHAMPTON WILL HAVE POLICE OFFICER

Judge Keller Signs Order Directing Supervisors To Make Appointment

OTHER COURT AFFAIRS

SOUTHAMPTON, Mar. 17.—Upper Southampton Township, with large war industries in its midst, with traffic becoming heavier and law violations increasing, is going to have its own police officer.

President Judge Hiram H. Keller yesterday signed an order directing the supervisors of Upper Southampton Township to appoint one of the citizens of that district as a police officer for one year, at a salary of $1500.

Under the township code, this action can be taken by Townships after a certain population is reached. The supervisors of the district will be informed by Attorney Charles B. Ementrout, of Doylestown, attorney in the case, and the $1500 salary will be provided for in the Township budget. The appointment will then follow.

A divorce was granted by Judge Keller for Judge Calvin S. Boyer in the case of Dorothy Sale McGahan, Langhorne Manor, against Harry McGahan, West Bristol, on grounds of indignities to the person. They were married at Croydon on April 17, 1940.

A parole was granted to Joseph Kosak, 59, of Neshaminy, who was sentenced on Feb. 16, to serve two months to one year in the county prison after he had pleaded guilty to driving while drunk.

Kosak appeared before Judge Keller.

FLAMES DAMAGE DOUBLE DWELLING ON MORRIS ESTATE, NEAR EMILIE, WHEN KEROSENE IGNITES AT HEATER

Two Families Routed by Blaze Which Sweeps One End of Structure—Charles Bruce and Charles Otis
Families Suffer Losses

Fire yesterday afternoon considerably damaged one end of a large stone farm house on the estate of the late Effingham B. Morris, above Emilie. The house, of stone construction, was jointly occupied by the families of Charles Otis and Charles E. Bruce. The building is located right in the center of a group of buildings, including large barns and other residences.

The flames were due, it is stated, to kerosene flowing from a tank in the basement beneath the Otis portion of the house into the cellar of the Bruce residence, where it came into contact with the heating furnace, in which was a coal fire.

Firemen were called, and Bristol Consolidated Department responded with two pieces of apparatus, and Edgely Company with two. The Bristol firemen were the first to reach the scene, and after connecting with a fire hydrant right near the building afire, found that it was dry. The hose had to then be disconnected and laid to a pond about 1500 feet away. A single line was laid and then broken into two smaller lines.

Due to the loss of time, the flames gained great headway, and were roaring through the first floor of the building when water first struck them. The blaze centered chiefly in the Bruce portion of the dwelling and burned its way from the cellar into the first floor. The smoke was very dense and for a time firemen could not enter.

Mr. Bruce was the first to discover the kerosene running into the basement of his dwelling when he went to the cellar. He and his wife tried to stop the flow of oil by using paper to soak it from the floor. But Mrs. Bruce states that there was a "puff" and then flames burst out.

The building, a two and a half story stone structure, was soon filled with smoke and flames, and firemen had a real battle on their hands. The building being of stone prevented the flames from spreading to any adjoining structures.

Mr. Bruce recovered a portion of a sum of money which was in the house, and the watch and rings of Mrs. Bruce were found intact.

Farmers from the vicinity were attracted to the scene and aided in removing furniture and clothing from the Otis dwelling. The Bruce family in addition to having all furniture ruined, also lost considerable clothing and personal effects.

Mrs. Bruce states that she was alone in the center basement of the property at the instant that the "explosion" occurred. She had secured a broom, and with this tried to battle the blaze, but found it was too much to conquer. She was burned slightly on the right hand just before she made her escape through the outside cellar door, which opens onto the rear porch of the property. Her mother, Mrs. James Wintersteen, was on the first floor at the time, and she also made her way from the building. In the other end at the time were Mr. and Mrs. Otis, who were aided by neighbors in getting furniture from the place.

The Otis family took their goods yesterday to the home of the latter's father, Charles Henry Moon, at Woodbourne. The eight members of the Bruce family were cared for by neighbors overnight. They had little clothing that could be used.

The Bruce home consisted of eight rooms and bath, and in the Otis section were five rooms and bath. With Mr. and Mrs. Bruce and two children there were residing for a time Mrs. Wintersteen, her daughter and two sons, whose new home nearby is not expected to be completed until May.

Firemen were summoned by means of a neighbor's telephone. The kerosene, it is stated, was used by the Otis family for fuel in small heating stoves.

"SPECIFY WHEREIN"

There is an ancient and over-worked anecdote about the parson whose congregation requested that he seek greener pastures because "yo' argues an' yo' disputes, but yo' does not specify wherein."

Somewhat that anecdote comes to mind when one reads that the London press is clamoring for an "immediate, all-out offensive" against the Axis. The London newspapers cannot be blamed for that, of course. American newspapers have been even more insistent in clamoring for the same thing—and so have American spokesmen of various groups of political opinion.

Of course the war cannot be won by merely defensive fighting, and defensive fighting is all that the United Nations have been doing for the last three months. This is true even of Russia, whose splendid counter-offensive has been deep within Russian territory and is, at best, a bright promise of a real offensive against Germany after completion of the defensive operation of clearing Russian soil of invaders.

But those who demand an Allied offensive fail to specify where it can be carried effectively to the enemy at this particular moment. The United Nations' resources have been unequal to the task of effective defensive operations in the Far East, thus far, except for General MacArthur's amazing defense of the little peninsula of Bataan. In the circumstances, can the same resources be immediately employed with success in an "all-out offensive?"

The picture in Europe is somewhat different—and perhaps a bit more encouraging. British air attacks on German military positions and German munitions plants in occupied France may be a preliminary gesture toward setting up that long-demanded "second front"—although there are signs and portents that the "second front" may be set up, by Hitler's own volition, in the Middle East or at the western end of the Mediterranean.

If and when the United Nations have the requisite air, sea and land strength, in men and material, mobilized for an effective offensive, by all means let the Axis have it. An abortive offensive—a mere "token offensive"—with inadequate forces and supplies—would be an invitation to disaster. Everyone hopes that the men and material soon will be available for a real offensive at the point best calculated to do the Axis irreparable damage. Until such an offensive can be undertaken on the grand scale, it might be well for those who are clamoring for "immediate, all-out" action to "specify wherein."

Perhaps the tin can salvage program could be boosted by persuading radio advertisers to offer a three-color sticker to every listener who sends in not a box top but a tin can, with or without label.

The Russian armies, which Hitler announced last fall had been annihilated, have just surrounded another Nazi army, this time on the Leningrad front.

Unless an order rescinds the sun's practice of rising earlier every morning, folk will soon have more daylight to save.

Riding qualities of American tanks now leaving the assembly lines have been improved, it is announced. But are they hard hitting?

MATA HARI'S Daughter

By MAURICE DEKOBRA and LEYLA GEORGIE

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE
Prince Vaslav's hand shot out, grasped the arm of the Mountwinn neices.

"Qui...et!" He divided the word into slow, fierce syllables. Gladys gave a little gasp. "Don't please! You're hurting me!" He relaxed his grip. Looking intently into her eyes, he demanded, "Why did you come here tonight? I told you I was busy. Besides... it is dangerous."

"Dangerous? How?"
"You must know."
She shook her head.

"I don't care about that. Anyway, that's not the real reason why you told me to stay away! It's another woman. It always is... Who is it this time?"

Involuntarily Vaslav glanced toward the rehearsal room. He recovered himself.

"Never be jealous, my golden one. It is woman's least becoming frailty. But I shall prove your suspicions are, as usual, unjust. If you will wait only a little while, until I finish this rehearsal, I shall join you."

"Where?"
"Where but our usual place?" He beckoned to the skirted valet, "Ivan!"

Lady Gladys touched Vaslav's arm. "You promise?"
"Of course!"

Silently the servant preceded her to the end of the hall. He touched a wall hanging and it moved aside, revealing a tiny house elevator. The man stood aside for Lady Gladys to pass. As the lift ascended, the wall-hanging fell back into place.

Vaslav returned thoughtfully to the rehearsal room. A few moments later he was explaining volubly to Brinda the significance of the numbered squares on the chessboard.

"It simplifies rehearsal greatly," he said, "Merely by remembering a sequence of numbers, it is impossible to make a mistake. Of course, in actual performance, the numbers will not be visible from the audience. But they will be there... for you and the other dancers to follow."

"It sounds a little mechanical."
"No doubt," he agreed. "But I am sure it will prove helpful, even for you. As for those others—" He indicated the girls rehearsing—"for them, it is necessary. They would not remember without it."

At the end of a half hour, he abruptly cut the rehearsal short.

"My car will take you where you wish to go," he told Brinda, after escorting her to the door. "There will be another rehearsal the day after tomorrow. May I count on you?"

"I suppose so," said Brinda, a little vaguely, her thoughts busy with the problem of her incalculable host.

"I will phone you to make sure. Goodnight... my premiere danseuse."

She sank back in the luxurious car cushions... Not until the car had gone several blocks did she notice that the chauffeur was not the one who had driven her before.

Lady Gladys waited impatiently. This room was known to few of Prince Vaslav's visitors. It was a strictly private retreat on an upper floor, so constructed that no sign of it was visible from the stairs or hall. It contained a desk, books in a half dozen languages, an immense burnished geographical globe, a small piano, and a broad low lounge, luxuriously deep.

"Quite a low rehearsal!" she said acidly, as Vaslav entered.

Without answering, he picked up an intercommunicating phone affixed to a low table beside the lounge. He spoke rapidly into the transmitter—in Russian.

"What did you say?" asked Gladys as he hung up.

Vaslav smiled.

"Only that I am not to be disturbed."

He disposed his strong, supple figure carelessly on the divan, ordering gently, "A cigarette, my dear."

Lady Gladys drew a sharp breath. For a moment she stood motionless, her head lifted haughtily. Then she obeyed.

"A light," she held the flame close.

Vaslav exhaled a careful ring of smoke, removed the cigarette, and with his free hand drew her face to his. Their lips merged in a long kiss.

"Do you know," he said, "your hair is very beautiful in this light?"

"Do you know," Gladys replied, "that you are the most heartless, unscrupulous, fascinating man in London?"

Vaslav laid the cigarette aside. "Nonsense, my darling. I am only a very simple fellow, who penetrated your pose of British hauteur. I knew at once that you were a most human, a most voluptuous woman... and that in spite of your attempt to impersonate an austere society snob! So I made love to you, like a sensible man; and like a normal woman, you responded."

"But do you love me?" The voice of the Mountwinn heiress strove to be casual. The attempt was not a signal success. She went on, "You bewilder me so, darling—you are so mysterious—and there are so many other women... there was a new one tonight, wasn't there?"

Vaslav laughed outright.

"Yes, my dear, there was a new one, and I can thank you for making her acquaintance. She is your charming friend Brinda Duncan, whom your excellent father, the good Lieutenant Malden, also seems to find most attractive. I am giving her the principal part in the Chessboard Ballet."

Gladys sprang to her feet.

"No! I won't have it! That nameless creature from nowhere! Oh, I might have known it! I could see that her special gift. Even in school she had the boys making fools of themselves. And now you!"

"Compose yourself, my golden one," soothed Vaslav. "Your friend Brinda interests me only because she is really a marvelous dancer, and, even more, because she may be extremely useful."

"Useful! How do I know that you just don't think of me as 'useful,' too?"

"You are useful, my sweet," said Vaslav, "but useful in a different way."

For a while there was no more speech. Then: "Vassie, darling, why must you go on with this strange way of living? Why can't we go to America... anywhere...? If it's a question of money, you know I have enough—more than we'll ever need."

MY MOTHER

As the years roll swiftly by
My memories stray to boy-hood days.
And my thoughts are filled with longing for Someone I love—so far away.

Someone who always cared for me
Through the days and nights so long.
Someone who sacrificed her best years
And taught me right from wrong.

Someone who always understood
My faults, my hopes, my scheming too
Someone who did the best she could
And always made my dreams come true.

Someone who asked for no reward
For the million things she did for me.
Someone who was always near,
Watching, loving, so tenderly.

Someone who will always know
That I realize her worth;
Someone who I truly love
More than anything on earth.

Someone who is waiting now
For me—across the sea.
Someone who I know will wait
Until Eternity.

Someone whose courage, faith and love,
Will follow me forever,
Someone sent from Heaven above
My best friend—MY MOTHER.

Honey Apple Dumplings take NO sugar

Here's good news! Whenever you're short of sugar, serve these Honey Apple Dumplings. They're EXTRA-delicious and the honey adds a new flavor to tart apples. Honey in the mellow-rich sauce bakes into a beautiful glaze over flaky crisp crust.

To get every bit of this grand honey flavor you need a delicate pastry. That's why it is important to use a purer all-vegetable shortening like Spry, the flavor-saver.

Honey Apple Dumplings

2 cups sifted flour 1 tablespoon butter
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder 6 tablespoons honey
1/2 teaspoon salt 1 cup Spry
3/4 cup sugar 1 cup lemon juice
6 medium apples 1/2 teaspoon salt
cored and pared

Sift flour with baking powder and salt. Cut in Spry fine. Add milk, mixing until soft dough is formed. Roll dough into rectangle, 12 x 18 inches. Cut into 6 squares.

Place an apple in each square. Fill centers with combined butter, honey, lemon juice and salt. Moisten edges of dough with cold water. Bring up four corners of dough to top of apple and press edges firmly together.

Place in 10x10x2-inch Spry-coated pan. For variation, place several dumplings upside down and prick tops. Serve with or without cream.

Sauce

1/2 cup honey 2 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 cups water 1/2 teaspoon salt

Boil honey, water, butter, Spry and salt together 5 minutes. Pour over apple dumplings and bake in hot oven (400°F.) 30 to 35 minutes.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

O Thou Who didst create the heavens and the earth and all that in them is, we pray today that Thou wouldst use Thy creative power to create a clean heart within us, and to renew a right spirit within us. We know that it is only through the recreative power of God that a new spirit can dwell within our lives, and we pray that that recreation may take place now. We know our helplessness without Thee, we know our hopelessness without Thee. Make us fully Thine, in the Name of Jesus, Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

When Cadets get furloughs, they head for New York for fun and relaxation. And when they get to the big city, things happen! "Cadet Girl," a gay film centers around just such a situation, and entrusted it to two of its fast rising young stars—Carole Landis and George Montgomery.

Called a "littering, laughing triangle film," the new picture which is due today at the Grand Theatre, poses the tenuous situation of a West Pointer feuding with his tune baron brother over the latter's lovely vocalist, Carole Landis.

Interspersed with the intriguing story are five new songs by those masters of tunes, Robin and Ranger.

BENSALEM GIRLS LOSE GAME TO MAR SEASON'S RECORD

Coach Helen Smith's Lassies
Had Won Nine Straight
Games

LOWER MORELAND WON Game Was Lost By Narrow Margin of Two Points

A lone defeat in the final game of the season marred the record of the Bensalem Township High School girls' basketball champions, again champions of Lower Bucks County.

Coach Helen Smith's lassies won nine straight games before being deadlocked by Southampton and in the final tilt, Lower Moreland beat out the Owlettes by a lone field goal, 30-28. Incidentally, Lower Moreland had an undefeated season this year.

But the girls from the Bristol Pike institution are proud of their record and the fact that they have added another Lower Bucks County trophy to their case in the hallway of the Bensalem school. In totalling the number of points scored by the Bensalem forwards, it was discovered that the Smith-coached girls had 420 points to their credit or a little better than 38 points per game.

While all this offensive playing was going on the guards were doing a mighty job in holding down their foes to 284 points for the season or close to 26 points a game.

The bright spots in the Bensalem log of victories are the two over the Bristol high school girls. The first tilt ended 30-29 with Doris Ely sinking the winning field goal with less than a minute remaining to be played and in the second tilt a last-period rally gave the Owlettes the triumph.

Ely, high scoring forward, had a total of 178 points to her credit averaging 16 points a game. She was followed closely by Eleanor Hughes who hit the cords for a total of 121 points. Although she missed several games, Hazel Lamson had 96 points to her credit.

Some of the girls who took to the defensive part of the game were: Doris Gonzalez, Edna Meisinger, Mildred Vanzant, Doris Cribbier, and Perkins.

The Bensalem record is as follows:

Bensalem	Opponent	Score
46	Buckingham	26

Sister and brother arrived there this morning ran from them, claiming she did not recognize them.

The girl, however, told the motor police of some of her activities during the past few days. She claims she rode back and forth from New York to Philadelphia, sometimes hitch-hiking rides on trucks. She states that on the second day after arriving in Philadelphia she decided to ride to New York.

Upon arrival she had but 38 cents, and desired a bath. Walking into one of New York's fine hotels she rode in the elevator to the 14th floor, then strolled down the corridor looking for a room where an attendant might be cleaning. Finding none she walked down to the 13th floor, and there walked into a room where a woman was busy fixing the room. The attendant is said to have informed the visitor that she thought she had checked out. "I told her I would be out in an hour, and to just finish up her work. Then I took a bath, donned my clothes and walked out, getting a bath for nothing."
